

The Suspects

Ashley Dunn

Once considered 'Hollywood's Sweetheart', Ashley starred in five blockbuster movies and received four nominations for Best Actress before she made the transition from actress to director. She claims that Hollywood "runs in her blood" as her father was a well-known actor, and her grandfather was a famous director in the 1920's and 30's. With two new directorial projects on the go (the first debuting at next year's film festival), Ashley is one busy star. In addition, she fills every free moment she has with charity work. Ashley is elegant, graceful and soft-spoken, and wears a designer dress made especially for her for the awards ceremony.

Sarah Westmore

A newer face on the Hollywood scene, Sarah Westmore is young, beautiful and talented – a triple threat. While she cut her teeth in acting on a number of smaller, independent productions, her recent success is thanks to her leading role in one of the largest movie franchises of all time, a movie trilogy called The Goodrich Incident. Despite her perceived overnight success, Sarah is not caught up in her own hype. While beautiful, she has been criticized for her "plain" looks, and how "ordinary" her appearance is compared to the rest of Hollywood's leading ladies. Realistic and down-to-earth, she is outspoken with the media and has been called one of "Hollywood's Misfits". Earlier tonight, Sarah secured herself the Best Actress award, and accepted it in an extravagant, flowing designer dress.

Morgan Quick

Pop princess Morgan Quick began her career as a country singer, made the switch to pop music and then transitioned to acting. At just 27 years old, she has already released five albums, the songs on which she wrote herself, has had 20 number one songs and won eight Grammy awards. Growing up in the industry, Morgan is constantly under scrutiny and in the public eye, and some say her early success has made her over-confident and has doomed her love life. She has appeared in a number of films, and has even lent her voice to some animated movies, and has won awards for her philanthropy. She was nominated for Best Actress for her role in the thriller "Ultra Sizzle", but failed to secure the accolade earlier this evening. Morgan wears a frilly designer dress and heels.

Aaralyn Davies

Once the star of one of the most successful sitcom television shows of all time, Aaralyn has made the jump to movies, and is a staple now at all major award shows, and is always one of the best dressed on the Red Carpet. With contracts for beauty products and movies in the works with some of the top directors, Aaralyn Davies is a true star. While she is also a philanthropist and activist, it's no secret that her nemesis is actress Sarah Westmore. Aaralyn wears a glamorous dress and a classic pair of heels.

Remy Spence

Late night talk show host Remy Spence is a comedian and host of The Super-Late Show with Remy Spence. One of the most popular talk show hosts in the world, Remy got his start as a stand-up comedian. His show is best-known for the pranks and stunts they pull and candid on-location interviews with celebrities. Fun-loving, hilarious and always up-beat, Remy is the life of the party. While not in the running for any awards tonight, he attended the ceremony in a suit - a detour from his usual on-air attire of casual slacks and dress shirts. While at the after party, he is recording quick interviews with celebrities on his smart phone for a segment on his show next week called "What The Stars Really Think".

Ryan Halstead

One of Hollywood's young elite, Ryan has been described to have the eyes of an angel, and the disposition to match. An actor and philanthropist, he is considered one of the most polite and genuine people in show biz - a feature some worry will ebb as he rises higher and higher as a star. His home-grown beginnings keep him humble though, and his immense acting skill is often overshadowed by his heart-throb status. Ryan took home the coveted Best Actor award tonight for his role in the final installment in the movie trilogy The Goodrich Incident. Ryan broke hearts on the red carpet this evening in a perfectly-cut tuxedo.

Colton Brody

Another member of Hollywood's young elite, Colton Brody began his career as a break dancer, starring in dance films on the big screen. He made the jump to serious dramas, but has found his biggest success in comedy. His impeccable comedic timing and disarming good looks have made him adored by women and respected by men, and he has even caught the attention of the best in the industry, having achieved a nomination for Best Actor. Colton Brody wears a tuxedo and a smile that makes people melt wherever he goes.

Elliot Vogel

Director Elliot Vogel is a well-known name in Hollywood thanks to his screen adaptation of a novel titled The Goodrich Incident, a trilogy. While the first of these movies was his Hollywood directorial debut, he has worked on a number of independent films, which is where he met his Goodrich Incident leading lady, Sarah Westmore. Not coincidentally, Sarah was awarded the accolade for Best Actress tonight for her role in the final of the three films, and Elliot's leading man, Ryan Halstead, took the award for Best Actor. Not surprisingly, Elliot Vogel was nominated for, and walked away with, the statue for Best Director this evening. Elliot wears a classic tuxedo.

Trevor Triggs

Bodacious, audacious and larger-than-life, Trevor founded a celebrity and entertainment news and information website called FKA, which has become the destination for dirt on celebrities. With over one thousand employees now working for him all over the world, Trevor has become an overnight success. Despite the source of his success, he claims to operate with integrity and prides himself on reporting the highest-quality celebrity sleaze. He wears a three-piece suit and a devilish grin.

Charlie Shaw

Most famous for his slapstick rolls in which he plays 'the awkward geek', Charlie Shaw is comedic actor who's been accused of not having much depth and range – a one-trick pony, so to speak. A new addition to the Hollywood scene, he is most famous for his friendship with Colton Brody. The two have now starred together in two blockbuster comedies, one for which Colton was nominated for an award tonight. Critics insist that if not for Colton Brody's success, Charlie would not be as successful as he is today. Regardless, in spite of the lack of a nomination, he attended the awards ceremony this evening in a three-piece suit, and still wears it, albeit without the bow tie, to the after party tonight.
