

*A Flapper Murder
at the 1920's Speakeasy*

The Suspects

Hazel Turner

Sassy, saucy and full of spunk, Hazel gives any man a run for their money. The typical flapper, Hazel enjoys smoking from a long cigarette holder, dancing the Charleston and drinking to excess. She loves her jazz loud, her whiskey strong and is often one of the last people to leave The Half Moon Club at the end of the evening. Because of her loyalty, she has become friends with the owner, Charles "Lucky" Coleman.

June Jenkins

June is older than the other girls who hang out at The Half Moon Club, and is rumoured to be good friends with the owner, Charles "Lucky" Coleman. She is distinguished and elegant, and is considered a bit of a "high-hat" or a snob. She loves to dance, and is always on the look out for a man to partner her on the dance floor.

Ruby Miller

Ruby is a woman who just can't say no... she loves to party and thrives on the attention of men. She claims she has recently left her high society family to live it up as a flapper, much to the chagrin of her father. She has vocal training and her family planned for her to become a professional opera singer, but now she puts all that at risk as she parties and drinks her nights away. She's new to town, is quite secretive and is usually accompanied to The Half Moon Club by at least one "wet blanket" - a male chaperone.

Charles "Lucky" Coleman

Charles "Lucky Foot" Coleman (AKA "Lucky") owns The Half Moon Club, and extends his welcome to all types of patrons from all walks of life – providing they can pay for an evening of entertainment. While no one has proof, it is suspected he is also affiliated with a local mafia ring and that his affiliation is why business is booming. Rumour has it that Charles and Fanny Birchwood, the deceased, were in a relationship.

Fred Ford

Fred is one of the richest, most dashing and debonair men to frequent The Half Moon Club. And while he's one of the most pursued men in the club, he remains single, devoted only to his cat, Miffy and his single status.

Leonard Lewis

It's not easy being a bartender during prohibition, but Leonard managed to score himself the gig because he's a personal friend of The Half Moon Club's owner, Charles "Lucky" Coleman. He is charismatic and loves to chat with the patrons. His magnetic personality makes him privy to all sorts of the club patrons' dark secrets. He is dating Virginia Shaw, a waitress at The Half Moon Club.

Dick Devins

Detective Devins has been on the force for years and is quick to interrogate suspects with his fists. He has made a name for himself in the city with his arrest and confession record, and he's always thinking about the advancement of his career.

Joe Little

Despite his name, Joe Little is not a man to be trifled with. He is strong and brash, and won't waste a second throwing a patron out of The Half Moon Club if he thinks it necessary. He's a hard man who rarely smiles and takes his position at The Half Moon Club very seriously.

Elmer Kugler

Elmer Kugler is at the Half Moon Club tonight in an official capacity – as Ruby Miller's chaperone. In the interest of maintaining propriety, he is always at Ruby's side. While most flappers would think a chaperone would cramp their style, Ruby Miller doesn't seem to mind his presence at all. He's high-strung and keeps a vigil eye on those around him – and Ruby.