

The Suspects

SHOT IN THE DARK MYSTERIES.COM

*A Flapper Murder
at the 1920's
Speakeasy*

Hazel Turner

A Flapper

Sassy, saucy and full of spunk, Hazel gives any man a run for their money. The typical flapper, Hazel enjoys smoking from a long cigarette holder, dancing the Charleston and drinking to excess. She loves her jazz loud, her whiskey strong and is often one of the last people to leave The Half Moon Club at the end of the evening.

Ruby Miller

A Flapper

Ruby is a woman who just can't say no... she loves to party and thrives on the attention of men. She claims she has recently left her high society family to live it up as a flapper, much to the chagrin of her father. She has vocal training and her family planned for her to become a professional opera singer, but now she puts all that at risk as she parties and drinks her nights away. She's new to town, is quite secretive and is usually accompanied to The Half Moon Club by at least one "wet blanket", or "chaperon".

Marian Coleman

The Club Owner

Marian Coleman owns The Half Moon Club, and extends her welcome to all types of patrons from all walks of life – providing they can pay for an evening of entertainment. While no one has proof, she is suspected of having mafia affiliations through her late husband, and these ties are the reason her clubs remain open while police are cracking down on illegal establishments. There have also been rumours about the possibility that she caused her husband's death.

SHOT IN THE DARK
MYSTERIES.COM

*A Flapper Murder
at the 1920's
Speakeasy*

Arlene Logue

The Bartender

While in any other club having a female bartender would be improper, the usual rules no longer apply – not since Marian Coleman took over her late husband's clubs! She's not only a fantastic bartender, but can handle any man who comes her way. Arlene is charismatic and loves to chat with the patrons but won't take any sass. Her magnetic personality makes her privy to all sorts of the club patrons' dark secrets – especially after they've had a few drinks.

Virginia Shaw

The Waitress

Hired by Charles “Lucky” Coleman personally just before his death, Virginia splits her employment between The Half Moon Club and Marian Coleman's other speakeasy, The Caterpillar Club. She is sharp-tongued, and who wouldn't be – night after night dealing with the flappers and men who frequent the club!

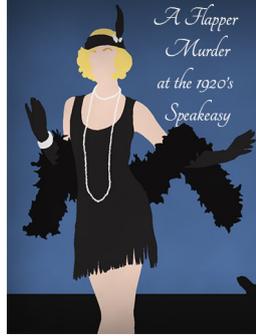

Dick Devins

The Detective

Detective Devins has been on the force for years and is quick to interrogate suspects with his fists. He has made a name for himself in the city with his arrest and confession record, and he's always thinking about the advancement of his career.

SHOT IN THE DARK
MYSTERIES.COM

*A Flapper Murder
at the 1920's
Speakeasy*

Eugene Collins

A Patron

Eugene is not a regular at The Half Moon Club. His posture and clothing suggest he is not a regular of any speakeasy, but instead comes from high society. Eugene is curt and sometimes downright rude with anyone who attempts to speak with him, but when he does speak his use of the English language suggests an education only money (and lots of it) can buy.