

The Suspects

Andrea Lancaster

Andrea is a sweet and mild-mannered woman. She only arrived in the city about a year ago, and has not made many friends yet. She is quiet and serious most of the time, and spends her days working in insurance.

Karen Rouse

Karen is an attorney and brags some of the city's most prestigious citizens as her clients. She is serious and stern, and going up against her in court is a harrowing experience for even the most seasoned legal professional!

Betty Lofts

Betty is an introvert. Upon meeting her, most people first assume that she's a snob, but this is not the case. When approached, Betty loves to embark on deep conversations, but most people leave her alone. She works as a massage therapist in one of the city's top sports rehabilitation centers. She loves to travel, and travels internationally at least three times a year.

Laura Bruiser

The fiancée of the deceased, Laura was invited to the party strictly because of her association with David, and no one else knows her very well. She's outgoing though – a definite extrovert, and had already made a number of friends at the party this evening... before her fiancée was found dead, that is...

Carola Tracey

Hired in to help plan the party and make sure that everything goes off without a hitch, Carola is organized and calculating, and will let nothing stand between her and a perfect party! It's a rare person who says no to this feisty firecracker, which means that she can meet the desires of even the most demanding clients. Carola is Morrison Gunn's cousin, and has recently hired him as her assistant. Carola and Morrison communicate through a pair of headsets.

Frank McClean

Frank is dashing good looking and a bit of a playboy. His tousled hair and ripped jeans make women swoon. He uses his looks to his advantage, although he is also one of the most genuine people you could meet. He is always at the hottest parties and is incredibly photogenic, which comes in handy when the newspapers run pictures of him in the society section.

Thomas Waverley

Thomas is a jeweler and enjoys his job immensely. His friends enjoy gems and jewels for Christmas each year, and he loves sharing his wealth. But get on his bad side and look out! Thomas has a lot more pull than first impressions suggest, and once crossed, Thomas is a fierce adversary. He loves the finer things in life, and is a self-proclaimed epicurean.

Max Lapelle

Max is every bit a distinguished gentleman, and a bit of a mystery. He is new to the city and not a lot is known about his past. He will never be caught without his three-piece suit on, and boy, does he make it look good! He has been compared to James Bond, and is just as popular with the ladies as the screen icon.

Daniel Whittington

Daniel is a local restaurateur and entrepreneur. He operates three restaurants in the city, and their reputation is legendary. He's considered a pillar in the community, and even opens up his restaurants each year on Christmas to allow the homeless and less fortunate to eat a warm Christmas dinner for free.

Morrison Gunn

Morrison is a loner, and prefers to keep to himself. He was only recently hired by his event planner cousin, Carola Tracey, as her assistant, and is attending the festivities in a working capacity. Morrison tends to answer questions with one word and isn't interested in others, which tends to put people off. Morrison wears a headset that keeps him in constant contact with Carola.

Willie Welch

Although most people don't know it at the party, Willie is a police snitch and informant, although he prefers the term "spy". Although the police have insisted he not put himself in league with criminals in order to funnel them information, he does it anyhow. They humour him, but the information he brings them is largely unusable. He's always angling for the next piece of information to take to the police, and enjoys making citizen's arrests whenever he can.

Tyson Wagner

A real estate agent, Tyson takes pride in the fact that his approach to selling real estate is unconventional. Where most agents put their faces on billboards and bus stops, Tyson runs lively TV and radio spots about his listings that most people find annoying, but that no one can ignore. Because of his over-the-top methods Tyson actually has the highest sales rate in the city, and his listings have grown so big that he has had to bring on a team of other agents to help share the workload. Almost a comical character that people endure in the city, Tyson is outgoing and vivacious – although he is never quite sure whether people are laughing with him or at him. As long as the money keeps rolling in, though, he doesn't really care either way.